

Panelist Bios

What to Do About Section 230?

Matthew Feeney, Cato Institute

Matthew Feeney is the director of Cato's Project on Emerging Technologies, where he works on issues concerning the intersection of new technologies and civil liberties. Before coming to Cato, Feeney worked at Reason magazine as assistant editor of Reason.com. He has also worked at the American Conservative, the Liberal Democrats, and the Institute of Economic Affairs. His writing has appeared in the New York Times, the Washington Post, HuffPost, The Hill, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Washington Examiner, City A.M., and others. He also contributed a chapter to Libertarianism.org's Visions of Liberty. Feeney received both his BA and MA in philosophy from the University of Reading.

Josh Hammer, Internet Accountability Project (IAP)

Josh Hammer is opinion editor of Newsweek, a research fellow with the Edmund Burke Foundation, counsel and policy advisor for the Internet Accountability Project, a syndicated columnist through Creators, and a contributing writer from American Compass. Josh is a frequent pundit and essayist on political, legal, and cultural issues, and is a constitutional attorney by training. A graduate of Duke University and the University of Chicago Law School, Josh previously clerked for the Hon. James C. Ho of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and was a John Marshall Fellow with the Claremont Institute. In addition to publishing with many leading lay outlets, such as National Affairs, First Things, City Journal, and Public Discourse, he has published formal legal scholarship with the Harvard Journal of Law & Public Policy and the University of St. Thomas Law Journal.

Annie McAdams, Annie McAdams PC

Annie McAdams exclusively represents victims nationwide who have been harmed due to the negligence or acts of others. Ms. McAdams is currently the lead trial attorney in the sex trafficking cases against Facebook, Instagram & Salesforce.

Russ White, Juniper Networks

Russ White is a well-known voice in computer networking, where he advocates for simplicity, privacy, and the decentralized Internet. He co-hosts the Hedge and the History of Networking podcasts, serves on the Internet Architecture Board and in a leadership role in the FR Routing open-source community. Russ has co-authored many software patents, books, and hours of video training in computer networks. He holds a Ph.D. in apologetics and culture from Southeast Baptist Theological Seminary, an MACM from Shepherds Theological Seminary, and an MSIT from Capella University.

Antitrust Law and Big Tech

Roger Alford, Notre Dame Law School

Roger P. Alford joined the Notre Dame Law faculty in January 2012. Alford teaches and writes in a wide range of subject-matter areas, including international trade, international arbitration, international antitrust, and comparative law. He also served as the Deputy Assistant Attorney General for International Affairs with the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Department of Justice from 2017-2019. Before entering the legal academy, he served as a law clerk to Judge James Buckley of the United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, and Judge Richard Allison of the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands. He practiced law with Hogan & Hartson (now Hogan Lovells) in Washington, D.C., and was also a senior legal advisor to the Claims Resolution Tribunal for Dormant Activities in Zurich, Switzerland. In addition to publishing widely in leading law reviews and journals, Alford is the general editor of Kluwer Arbitration Blog and on the Executive Committee of the Institute for Transnational Arbitration. Alford earned his B.A. with Honors from Baylor in 1985, his J.D. with Honors from New York University, and his LL.M. from Edinburgh University.

Mark Jamison, American Enterprise Institute (AEI)

Dr. Mark Jamison is the Director and Gerald Gunter Professor of the Public Utility Research Center (PURC), and Director of the Digital Markets Initiative (DMI) at the University of Florida. He provides research and International training on business and government policy, focusing primarily on information technology, antitrust, technology development and adoption, and regulation. He is also a visiting scholar with the American Enterprise Institute. Prior to joining the University of Florida, Dr. Jamison was Manager of Regulatory Policy at Sprint, Head of Research for the Iowa Utilities Board, and Communications Economist for the Kansas Corporation Commission. He received a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Florida and a Master of Science in Agricultural Economics from Kansas State University.

John Newman, University of Miami School of Law

John Mark Newman is a professor at the University of Miami School of Law, an affiliate fellow with the Thurman Arnold Project at Yale, and a member of the advisory boards of the Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies and the American Antitrust Institute. He also regularly consults with private-sector clients on a variety of antitrust-related matters. Professor Newman's research, which has appeared in the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, Vanderbilt Law Review, George Washington Law Review, and other leading journals, focuses primarily on antitrust law issues involving digital markets. He is credited with coining the term "zero-price markets," and his scholarship on antitrust in zero-price markets has been cited by regulators and legislative bodies around the world. Before joining academia, Professor Newman was an Honors Program trial attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice Antitrust Division, where he was involved in a number of high-profile litigated cases, including United States v. AT&T and United States v. American Express Co.

Is Common Carrier the Solution to Big Tech's Censorship?

Adam Candeub, Michigan State University College of Law

Adam Candeub is Professor of Law at Michigan State University, and Senior Fellow at the Center for Renewing America. He was previously Acting Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Communications and Information. He joined NTIA as Deputy Assistant Secretary in April 2020. He later joined the Department of Justice as Deputy Associate Attorney General. Prior to his NTIA appointment, he was Professor of Law at Michigan State University, joining the faculty in 2004, and he also served as director of its Intellectual Property, Information, and Communications Law Program. His earlier government service includes work at the Federal Communications Commission in its Media Bureau and Wireline Competition Bureau, Competitive Pricing Division. He was an associate at Jones, Day, Reavis, and Pogue. He holds a J.D. magna cum laude from Penn Law and B.A. magna cum laude from Yale University. Immediately following law school, he clerked for Chief Judge J. Clifford Wallace, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Professor Candeub's scholarly interests focus on the law and regulation of communications, internet, technology. He is widely published in the areas of communications regulation and antitrust. Federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court, have cited and relied upon his work.

Richard Epstein, New York University School of Law

Richard A. Epstein is the inaugural Laurence A. Tisch Professor of Law at NYU School of Law. He has also served as the Peter and Kirstin Bedford Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution since 2000. Epstein is also the James Parker Hall Distinguished Service Professor of Law Emeritus and a senior lecturer at the University of Chicago. He has been a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences since 1985 and has been a Senior Fellow of the Center for Clinical Medical Ethics at the University of Chicago Division of Biological Sciences, also since 1983. He served as editor of the Journal of Legal Studies from 1981 to 1991, and of the Journal of Law and Economics from 1991-2001. From 2001 to 2010 he was a director of the John M. Olin Program in Law and Economics at the University of Chicago. Professor Epstein researches and writes in a broad range of constitutional, economic, historical, and philosophical subjects. He has taught administrative law, antitrust law, communications law, constitutional law, corporation criminal law, employment discrimination law, environmental law, food and drug law, health law, labor law, Roman law, real estate development and finance, and individual and corporate taxation. Professor Epstein also writes a legal column, the Libertarian, and is a contributor to Ricochet.com and the SCOTUSblog.

Philip Hamburger, Columbia University School of Law

Philip Hamburger is the Maurice and Hilda Friedman Professor of Law at Columbia Law School, and President of the New Civil Liberties Alliance. Before coming to Columbia, he was the John P. Wilson Professor at the University of Chicago Law School. He writes on constitutional law and its history — with particular emphasis on religious liberty, freedom of speech and the press, judicial office, administrative power, and unconstitutional conditions. He also studies Anglican, Baptist, and Quaker history, early secularism, and the Ku Klux Klan. His books are Separation of Church and State (Harvard 2002), Law and Judicial Duty (Harvard 2008), Is Administrative Law Unlawful? (Chicago 2014), The Administrative Threat (Encounter 2017), and Liberal Suppression: Section 501(c)(3) and the Taxation of Speech (Chicago 2018). A forthcoming book is Purchasing Submission: Conditions, Power, and Freedom (Harvard 2021). He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and he has served on the board of directors of the American Society for Legal History. He has twice received the Sutherland Prize for the most significant contribution to English legal history, and has been awarded the Henry Paolucci - Walter Bagehot Book Award, the Hayek Book Prize, and the Bradley Prize.

Eugene Volokh, UCLA School of Law

Eugene Volokh teaches First Amendment law and a First Amendment amicus brief clinic at UCLA School of Law, where he has also often taught copyright law, criminal law, tort law, and a seminar on firearms regulation policy. Before joining UCLA, he clerked for Justice Sandra Day O'Connor on the U.S. Supreme Court and for Judge Alex Kozinski on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Volokh is a member of The American Law Institute, a member of the American Heritage Dictionary Usage Panel, and the founder and coauthor of The Volokh Conspiracy, a leading legal blog. His work has been cited by opinions in eight Supreme Court cases and several hundred court opinions in total, as well as several thousand scholarly articles.