America's Cultural Crisis: Public Schools! "Should We Stay or Should We Go?"

We will unpack the ISSUES and CHOICES facing parents.

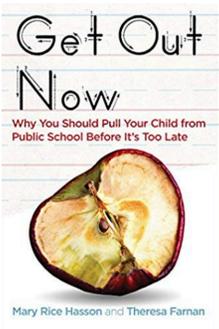

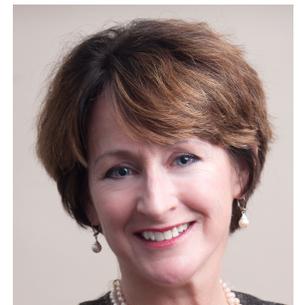

"Almost overnight, America's public schools have become morally toxic, especially for families of faith, who value traditional morality and common sense. Millions of parents with children in public schools are asking, 'Should we stay, or should we go?'"

Parents' Rights In Education is proud to host Mary Rice Hasson, the first speaker of many in our lecture series. Mary Rice Hasson, J.D. and Theresa Farnan Ph. D., authored the most contemporary and compelling analysis of public schools today, Get Out Now.

Mary Rice Hasson is the Kate O'Beirne Fellow at the Ethics and Public Policy Center in Washington, D.C., where she also directs the Catholic Women's Forum. An expert on culture, faith, sexual morality, and gender ideology, Mary speaks frequently at national and regional conferences, writes for a variety of publications and websites, and is a frequent television and radio commentator on issues pertaining to women, faith, culture, and families, as well as parental rights. Mary has presented information on gender and transgender issues to leaders, educators, and parents all over the U.S. and has consulted on state legislation and provided advice to non-profits working to protect parents' rights.

"...Don't just read this book; buy dozens of copies for family and friends. If you care about their kids, get them this book."

Paul Kengor, Ph.D., author of Takedown: From Communists to Progressives

"Don't be one of the millions of parents helplessly gobsmacked when your children leave their faith or consider irreversible self-mutilation. Not knowing what's happening may be comfortable, but it endangers your family. So, protect your children proactively. Start by reading this book."
